

"Home Improvement Industry Is Stimulating the Economy"

Spring is in the air and the home remodeling industry is blooming.

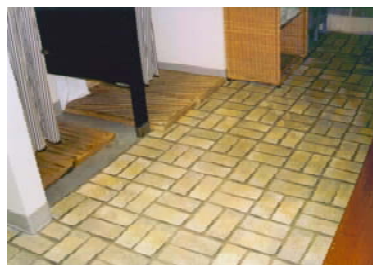

According to a recent article in the Dallas Morning News, Business section, home remodeling is booming. The article states that last year as Americans withdrew equity from their homes, they spent approximately $36 billion of that equity on remodeling projects and home improvements. Additionally, last year home remodeling and repairing rose 3% to bring in an estimated $219 billion. Consumers choosing to spend their dollars more wisely spent more on remodeling and improvements than they did on commercial construction, legal services, or clothing. What's more is that most of the money spent has been on adding comfort features. Mr. Apgar of Harvard University predicts that home remodeling will increase by an additional 4% in 2003, and Kermit Baker, also with Harvard University, says that the biggest problem will be finding enough labor sources to meet the demand.

What a perfect time to be a Quick Brick Distributor. Quick Brick offers consumers a very cost effective way to simulate expensive upgrades such as brick, tile, stone, or rock designs on exterior concrete surfaces as well as interior walls and floors. Our paint products, applicators, and methods are unique to the industry and lend itself to our fast paint painting techniques, which last through many years of wear and tear. Many times the cost savings of using Quick Brick leaves the consumer with money left to add even more comfort features. Additionally, as most industries reduce labor sources, it is comforting to work and thrive in an industry that has a shortage of labor.

If you are a Quick Brick Distributor, you have made an excellent choice. If you are contemplating becoming a Quick Brick Distributor, now is an excellent time. If you have not thought about becoming a Quick Brick Distributor, maybe you should give it some thought.
